

Northern Midlands Community shows great

The horrific stories coming out of Victoria as a result of recent bushfires have touched the hearts of businesses and individuals in the Northern Midlands, and many people have made positive efforts so that the burden of those people who have suffered because of the bushfires can be relieved. The Country Courier has managed to capture in pictures just some of the people who have made valuable contributions. It is recognised that many more people, in addition to those pictured, have also helped in the bushfire appeal, and their acts of sacrifice and generosity will no doubt be appreciated by our less fortunate friends across Bass Strait.

Fairlie Nicolson, of Campbell Town travelled to Perth so that she could make a contribution to the bushfire relief appeal at Dick Adams' office. Staff member Rae Mackenzie is pictured accepting Fairlie's donation.

Colin Pryce, Administrative assistant at Member for Lyons Michael Polley's Office in Longford, indicates the level of local generosity by showing the many donations piled high in Mr Polley's office.

Longford Pharmacy assistants Michelle McCann, left and Katrina Casey, with the donation container that was provided for customers. Over $100 was collected in the first hour!
